The building known as Grant Chapel was originally located at 301 West New England Avenue. In an agreement with owner Morney Partnership, Ltd., the City agreed to process a rezoning for property 216, 224, and 234 West Lyman Avenue to Office (O-2) so that if the rezoning was approved, Grant Chapel could be relocated to the new site and placed into service for that zoning district’s permitted uses. The rezoning was approved and the historic Grant Chapel building relocated and placed into service. It is now time to fulfill condition 3 of the agreement; listing the building as a historic property governed by Chapter 58 of the Land Development Code. The June 10, 2013 Grant Chapel Agreement and May 7, 2014 correspondence from the city attorney’s office are attached.

Description. The building is constructed in a vernacular ecclesiastical style. In its current setting, Grant Chapel faces east toward New York Avenue at the intersection of New York Avenue and West Lyman Avenue, and it is bounded by the railroad tracks on the south side. The setting includes elaborate hardscape and landscaping that serves its current use as a photographic studio and wedding chapel. The rectangular plan building is stucco with a front-facing one and one-half story gable roof. Originally on a raised foundation, a basement has been added in its new location. The one story entry porch faces east toward New York Avenue. The entry porch roof is v-groove metal, possibly original material, and the main roof is composition shingles – relatively new material. The overhang has exposed rafter tails. An additional entry to the former church offices is located on the south side elevation. The vestry/office portion is located in a short side-facing gabled extension. An ramp for accessibility has been added to this elevation. Four tall vertical windows are on the north side of the sanctuary and three are on the south. Each window is composed of eight (2x4) divided lights with textured tinted glass. Decorative vertical buttresses are placed along the long sidewalls of the sanctuary. The open front entry porch features four concrete steps leading to an arched opening. The sides of the entry porch have open arches. The front doors are a pair of paneled wood doors with period hardware. The entry stair walls have a simple coping edge that has been extended due to the new basement stairs which now flank the original entry.
Grant Chapel History. A cornerstone was laid for an African Methodist Episcopal church in Hannibal Square during 1893, and Grant’s Chapel was organized in Hannibal Square in 1906 as a member of the African Methodist Episcopal (AME) churches (MacDowell: 59, 88). The History of Winter Park states that the Grant Chapel congregation constructed a church on West New England Avenue in 1935 at a cost of $4,000 (MacDowell: 212). The building’s dedication plaque dedicates Grant’s Chapel Methodist Church on May 30, 1943. Reverend E. J. Sheppard was the Pastor. The trustees include a number of notable Hannibal Square residents of the time.

Grant Chapel is located in the Hannibal Square neighborhood. Unlike such purely residential historic areas as Virginia Heights or the College Quarter, Hannibal Square also contained churches, schools, a library and several businesses. Although many buildings have been altered or are in a deteriorated condition, the Hannibal Square area as a whole retains a level of integrity and cohesiveness. Hannibal Square is listed in the Black Heritage Trail guidebook published by the Florida Department of State.

Historic Background: Hannibal Square. African-Americans were an integral part of Winter Park’s development from its beginning in 1881. Loring Chase and Oliver Chapman, the town’s founders, were abolitionists from New England. Their original plan for the town designated a neighborhood, which was named Hannibal Square, for the homes of African-Americans who worked in the groves, hotels and homes, and as carpenters and farmers. Residents of Hannibal Square typically owned their own homes and land. Many parcels were large enough to serve as truck gardens and space for cows and chickens. The Winter Park Company donated land in Hannibal Square for a school and churches, and the neighborhood developed its own businesses, services, library, social clubs and cultural organizations. Hannibal Square had its own brass band and baseball team. The original street pattern and several houses and a few commercial buildings have survived to the present. Landmark buildings include the Mount Moriah Church, Bethel Baptist Church, Flowers Temple, Grant Chapel, the Early Rising Lodge, and Lake Hall Lodge.

The black residents of Hannibal Square played a vital role in the town’s early economic political and social life. The Winter Park Advocate, a newspaper edited by Gus Henderson, was first published in Hannibal Square in 1887. It was the second black-owned newspaper in Florida, and for several years the only newspaper in Winter Park. The black vote was essential for the incorporation of the town in 1887, and two Hannibal Square residents, Frank Israel and Walter Simpson, were elected as alderman on the first Town Council. In 1892, a political group sent a petition to the State Legislature, and the corporate town limits were changed to exclude Hannibal Square. Long since included back into incorporated Winter Park, Hannibal Square is a revitalizing neighborhood interested in its heritage.

Relocation Issues. Relocating a building is a last resort to avoid demolition. From a preservation perspective, relocating a building presents several issues. First, the context of the building will be altered. The association with the surrounding natural and built environment is lost. Left behind are features that make each building unique. Many of the character defining features that contribute to the architectural significance of a building may be damaged as a result of relocation. An improperly relocated building can have a negative impact on the setting of the existing buildings in a new location. Side and front setback, orientation, scale, mass and individual features of existing buildings should be considered when choosing an appropriate site.

Despite the negatives, appropriate relocation is preferable to demolition. Grant Chapel was located on a portion of a larger site slated for redevelopment, and it would have been demolished if not relocated. The building had already been placed in a compatible new use which traveled with the structure. There are several criteria to be considered when reviewing a proposal to move a building to a new site. The environment for the new site should be similar to the old one in terms of age of the context, surrounding buildings, their height, materials, setback and architectural details.

The relocation of the Grant Chapel building had special considerations. To retain its association with the history of Hannibal Square, it was relocated to a site in the neighborhood. The current lot is triangular. The general setting is fairly compatible with the original, even though the new landscape and hardscape is considerably more structured and formal. The building has been reoriented to face New York Avenue from a distance beyond a decorative brick wall and courtyard, and a side elevation is oriented toward Lyman Avenue. The use is compatible with the building. The stairways that flank the entry and lead down to the basement diminish the integrity of the character of the front of the building, however the basement entrance could be relocated in the future and the facade returned to its original appearance.

RECOMMENDATION: Staff's recommendation is for APPROVAL to designate Grant Chapel at 216 West Lyman Avenue as a historic resource in the Winter Park Register of Historic Places.

Re: Grant Chapel Development Agreement

Dear Ms. Stone:

This correspondence will address your questions regarding the procedure for designation of Grant Chapel as a historic landmark, as well as the issues regarding the proposed modifications to the structure. As you know, a public hearing was previously scheduled for April 9, 2014, to approve the addition of Grant Chapel to the Winter Park Register of Historic Places. This public hearing was cancelled as a courtesy following receipt of correspondence from the property owner, dated March 24, 2014, advising that the “move, property and building” were not complete, therefore, the owner was not in a position to authorize the City to designate Grant Chapel at that time.

As you know, the City and the property owner entered into the “Grant Chapel Agreement” (“Agreement”) on June 10, 2013 (copy enclosed). The recitals of the Agreement provide that the City and the Owner desire to preserve the history of the Hannibal Square community and to provide a useful and adaptive reuse of the historic structure by relocating the building. The recitals also state the Owner has further committed to the preservation of the Grant Chapel church structure.

Paragraph 3 of the Agreement provides that “upon completion of the move” the Property and the Grant Chapel Church building “shall be listed as a historic landmark property, and governed by Chapter 58, Land Development Code and Winter Park Historic Preservation Commission.” It does not say that the Owner has merely agreed to submit a request for approval upon completion of the move. Section 58-457 of the Winter Park Land Development Code requires the property owner’s authorization in order to proceed with designation, but the owner’s authorization has already been provided through this Agreement. Delay in designating the structure as a historic landmark would violate the express language of paragraph 3 of the Agreement.
Furthermore, in paragraph 3 of the Agreement, the owner agreed that he will not demolish or alter the building structure "in architectural style and integrity" without the City's consent. At present the owner has proposed several changes that would alter the architectural style of the building, including addition of a steeple, slate roof, and stained glass windows.

The City has the clear right to insist on the owner maintaining the architectural integrity of the historic building. It is my understanding that staff does not object to the slate roof or stained glass windows, as these changes would not significantly alter the integrity and appearance of the building. The addition of a steeple would constitute a significant alteration, however, as the chapel’s simple architectural style did not historically include this element.

In summary, the City should proceed with the public hearing to add the Grant Chapel to the Winter Park Register of Historic Places, as owner consent has been obtained and “completion of the move” has occurred. City staff may advise the property owner that they do not object to the proposed slate roof or stained glass windows, however, the addition of the steeple is a significant change that would alter the architectural style and integrity of the building. Once the Grant Chapel is designated as a historic landmark, the provisions of Chapter 58, Land Development Code, will apply, including the part requiring review of certain proposed changes to the Chapel by the Historic Preservation Commission.

Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions or need further assistance.

Sincerely,

Relocated Winter Park Wedding Chapel hopes for happily ever after

Construction delays made for a shaky transition for the Winter Park wedding chapel, but led to a new business expansion that helped the owners weather the uncertainty.
A Winter Park couple hopes the historic designation of a local chapel will bring stability to their wedding business, seven months after it was relocated by a local land developer.

The 79-year-old Grant Chapel, at the corner of Lyman and New York avenues, will be up for historic designation by the Winter Park Historic Preservation Board at their meeting next month.

The City Commission would need to give final approval before it became official.

A historic designation would come as a relief for Steve and Suzanne Graffham, who’ve run a wedding business out of the old building since 2009.

“The chapel would then have a longer life and we won’t be as worried about the future,” Suzanne said. “It will be more of a permanent fixture.”

“Even though I know they can still tear it down, it’s going to be harder.”

The old chapel holds a long history in Winter Park. Constructed in 1935, the building housed a black Methodist church in 1943. The congregation resided in the building all the way up until the 1990s when it outgrew the building and moved elsewhere, Steve said.

Today the chapel draws couples from across the globe to exchange vows.

But Steve and Suzanne’s wedding business went through a recent rough patch in the first half of 2014. They endured their business being relocating down the street last December, when property owner Dan Bellows had the building placed on dollies and moved from its original location on New England Avenue to make way for an incoming development.

Bellows spearheaded the effort to have the chapel placed on its new foundation, working alongside local nonprofit Traditional Neighborhoods Inc. to raise money for a brand new garden, fountain and stone walkway.

But the project took far longer than anticipated. Suzanne and Steve said they were told the building would be completed by mid-January, but the construction and refurbishing inside dragged on until late April.

Steve said that 10 to 15 weddings had to be moved to other locations, with some couples having already booked a year in advance.

“From a business standpoint that’s a nightmare,” Steve said. “...When you’re talking to a bride, who’s about to have the most important day of her life, and she’s got her heart set on a certain place and you phone her up and say, ‘It’s not ready.’”

That’s when the surrounding community stepped up to lend a hand. The First Congregation Church, Casa Feliz and the Alford Inn all stepped forward to serve as replacement locations for the soon-to-be-married couples.
The Graffhams have since started the Winter Park Wedding Company, which they use to host weddings at the three locations in addition to the chapel.

What started as a hectic mess became a lucrative business expansion, Steve said.

“We’re now doing weddings in those three locations as well,” Steve said. “An expanded business has come out of what was a negative of the move. [Suzanne] turned some potential nightmares into positive situations ... It was the fact that people in this city pulled together to help us out.”

Meanwhile the fountain, landscaping and the lightning still need to be finished at the Winter Park Wedding Chapel.

Steve and Suzanne are unsure of when the building will be completely finished, but they do know the value of having the chapel’s name in the historic register. It gives a sense of stability not only to them, but to the married couples who return to visit years later.

“It means security really,” Steve said. “It’s so important because it’s a place that’s really etched itself in the hearts of many people that have gotten married here and people who are looking to getting married here in the future.”

“It enters into people’s sentimental side really.”
